

It Hasn't Happened Yet Press Release

It Hasn't Happened Yet! is the story of one disabled woman's journey into the funny and peculiar world of comedy. Plunging chair-first into territory where few dare to go, in It Hasn't Happened Yet, Carr challenges conventional perceptions about language, humour, success, fame and even fish.

“Nothing is sacred with Liz Carr and Melbourne is seldom graced with a talent like hers. Her play, which tells the story of Alex tackling the mainstream as a crip jokester, is a finely hewed piece where theatre and stand-up are seamlessly interposed.”

- Art of Difference, Melbourne 2009

Following successful previews in Melbourne, London and at Leicester Comedy Festival, disabled comedian Liz Carr brings her new show to the Soho Theatre on the 7th, 8th, 14th and 15th August 2009. Written and performed by Carr and directed by New York-based actor and director Christine Bruno, “It Hasn't Happened Yet!” follows burgeoning comedian Alex Saunders as she navigates her way through the minefields of disability and comedy with wheelchair and alter-ego in tow.

If you've not seen it before, give it a go. If you've seen it before, give it another go - it now comes with added Barry Manilow! Don't worry, if you can't make the London dates, the show will be touring the UK in the coming months. Keep checking back for dates and venues. If you're planning on coming, here's the info. you'll need:

Venue: Soho Theatre, 21 Dean Street, London, W1D 3NE
Tickets and dates: August 7-8th and 14th-15th @ 8 pm
Box Office: 0207 478 0100, www.sohotheatre.com

All shows are wheelchair accessible and will be captioned for deaf and hard of hearing audience.